Reading comprehension their level of detail against the illustrations. The opposite of reading comprehension is called functional illiteracy. Comprehension specifically is a "creative, multifaceted process" that is dependent upon four language skills: phonology, syntax, semantics, and pragmatics. In education it is measured in standardized tests that report which percentile a reader's ability falls. Reading comprehension is beyond basic literacy alone, which is the ability to decipher characters and words at all. Reading comprehension occurs on a gradient or spectrum, rather than being yes/no (all-or-nothing). Reading comprehension relies on two abilities that are connected to each other: word reading and language comprehension. The teacher chooses two appropriate books for Reading comprehension is the ability to process written text, understand its meaning, and to integrate with what the reader already knows. Enactment of the federally-funded Interstate Highway System in 1956 led to competition... There is little scientific evidence regarding speed reading, and as a result its value seems uncertain. Cognitive neuroscientist Stanislas Dehaene says that claims of reading up to 1,000 words per minute "must be viewed with skepticism". Other types of reading and writing, such as pictograms (e.g., a hazard symbol and an emoji), are not based on speech-based writing systems. The common link is the interpretation of symbols to extract the meaning from the visual notations or tactile signals (as in the case of braille). Commonly called the Reading Railroad and logotyped as Reading Lines, the Reading Company was a railroad holding company for most of its existence, and a single railroad in its later years. Extensive reading Though used as a teaching strategy to promote second-language development, ER also applies to free voluntary reading and recreational reading both in and out of the classroom. through such reading, having interesting and engaging books, getting learners to do large quantities of reading at an appropriate level, and making sure Extensive reading (ER) is the process of reading longer, easier texts for an extended period of time without a breakdown of comprehension, feeling overwhelmed, or the need to take breaks. It stands in contrast to intensive or academic reading, which is focused on a close reading of dense, shorter texts, typically not read for pleasure. ER is based on the assumption that we learn to read by reading 0e42228723

Sustained silent reading ScSR and GROR share Sustained silent reading (SSR) is a form of school-based recreational reading, or free voluntary reading, where students read silently in a designated period every day, with the underlying assumption being that students learn to read by reading constantly. Schools have implemented SSR under a variety of names, such as "Drop Everything and Read (DEAR)", "Free Uninterrupted Reading (FUR)", or "Uninterrupted sustained silent reading. Despite this, proponents maintain that successful models of SSR typically allow students to select their own books and do not require testing for comprehension or book reports. While classroom implementation of SSR is fairly widespread, some critics note that the data showcasing SSR's effectiveness is insufficient and that SSR alone does not craft proficient readers. that scaffolded silent reading (ScSR) and guided repeated oral reading (GROR) are much more effective methods of independent reading 0e42228723
