D. In a sequence that resists its own formation, Helen or My Hunger wonders how to live in a world that seeks to reduce, to wound, what it cannot contain. 's 1961 epic Helen in Egypt, these poems address the eidolon of Helen of Troy: the \echo of an echo. Friend. In dialogue with H. Mother. These poems reckon with hunger, desire, and shame, and with the violence of language and representation (body as icon, as seat of trauma). How can we mark differences, but also make visible the samenesses. These poems address the ruptures of trauma, violence, with mythology and lineage, with the inevitable failings of gender and the body. Icon. \ They question notions of beauty and the body by communicating with this absence, sustaining this unsustainable dialogue. What violence do we sanction through language, through narrative, through form. Ghost. Helen or My Hunger is a looping, serial sequence that explores the relationship between memory, language, the body, and power. Helen or My Hunger asks: how can we live in a world where both private and public pain resist language. The core of Helen or My Hunger contains, and at the same time rejects-tries to distract itself from-the material of the writer's life and body 50b850b789
